OPPORTUNITY

The London Startup Scene Is Missing Infrastructure

American culture is naturally bottom-up co-ordinating, so things like hacker-houses can solve for collaboration and network-building, and individuals can naturally sell their ideas to the rest of the country.

British & European culture is more reliant on top-down co-ordination. The Victorians understood this, but The Royal Institution and Chambers of Commerce are no longer fit-for-purpose.

It's time for a new Techno-Optimistic Institution in Britain.

APPROACH

Not Another Hackerhouse

A member-run event space, maker space, campaigning org, meta-community, social club, and incubator - all rolled into one

- Inspire: A physical location in London dedicated to amplifying ambition and optimism
- Educate & Challenge: Structured on-ramps for bored software engineers to enter new fields and apply tech to real life
- Enable: Shared equipment & workspace, and founder-driven policy campaigning on issues that block progress

OPPORTUNITY

Parallel Policy Campaigning

Tech doesn't exist in a vacuum.

We have expert policy campaigners that sit alongside builders and help them speak to the right people in government. When needed, they'll also run targeted single-issue campaigns on progress-blocking laws and regulations.

Policy and Tech need to be considered together, particularly for frontier technologies that no-one knows how to regulate well yet.

APPROACH

Not A New Idea

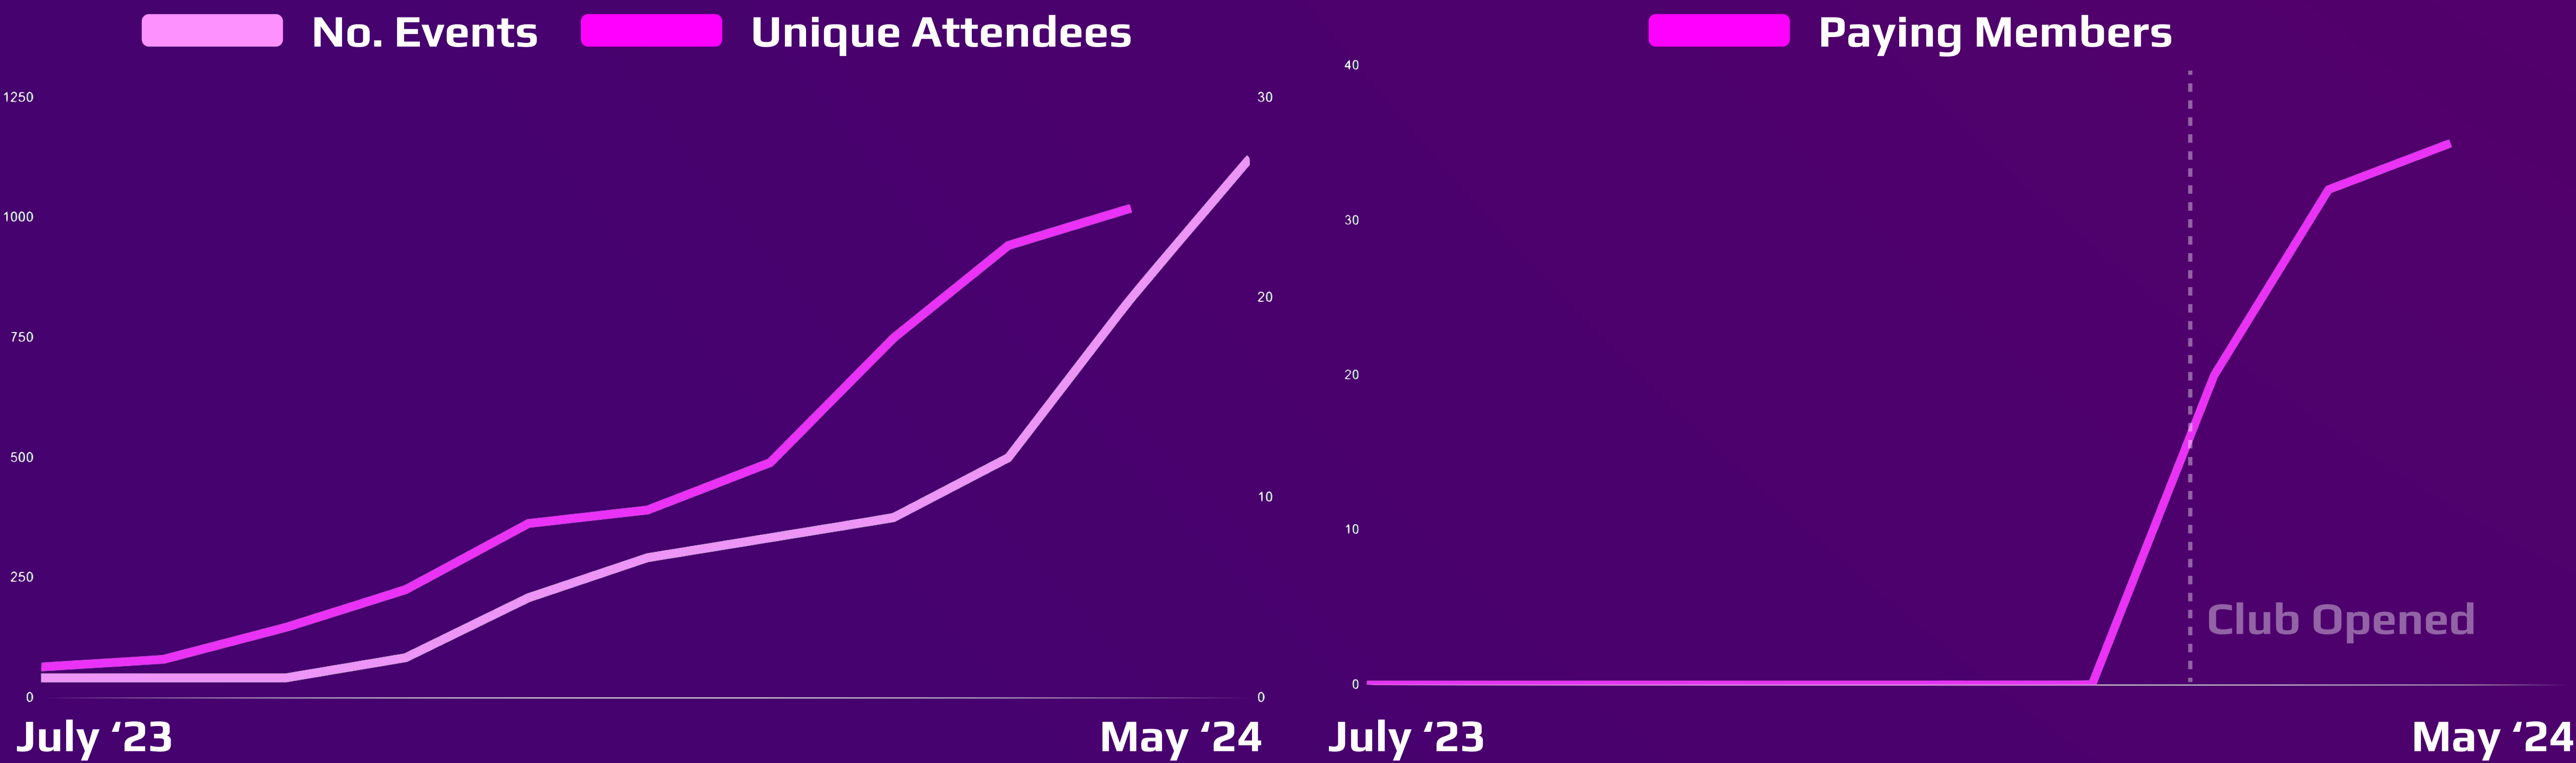

Or as Sir Benjamin Thompson put it in 1799 when proposing the RI:

“formation by Subscription, in the Metropolis of the British Empire, of a Public Institution for diffusing the Knowledge and facilitating the general Introduction of useful Mechanical Inventions and Improvements, and for the teaching by courses of Philosophical Lectures and Experiments, the application of Science to the Common Purposes of Life”
